Objectives	Analysis of the phenomenon of migration which has become a common problem for all countries of the World from a legal perspective
Content	In this lecture, the phenomenon of migration, which has become a common problem for all countries of the world, will be discussed from a legal perspective and current developments will be explained. In particular, the legal situation that has caused the influx of refugees into Turkey will be examined in comparison with Germany. In addition, due to the fact that the 1951 Geneva Convention can no longer respond to contemporary needs students will prepare international treaty drafts which can be postulated to relevant organizations under the leadership of Turkey.
