Objectives	Students understand the supervisory function of the courts with regard to the rule of law. It will be shown that, beyond theory, constitutional courts are (also) specialized courts and specialized courts are also constitutional courts. This applies to both substantive law and procedural law, and to varying degrees to all areas of law. In the first sessions, the conceptual and systematic foundations of the semester topic will be dealt with. The following lectures will discuss the problems outlined in the context of civil law in particular.
Content	In the context of civil law in particular, the functions and decisions of the constitutional courts and other courts with regard to the protection of the rule of law are discussed.
